EU Approves Windfall Energy Profits Tax

The European Union leaders approved a regulation with measures aimed at redistributing the energy sector's surplus revenues to final customers. The package includes a windfall tax on excess profits of certain energy companies, infra-marginal revenue cap on non-fossil fuel energy companies as well as measures to reduce consumption of electricity. The EU stopped short of setting a cap on gas prices, as requested by some Member states.

The windfall energy profits tax, or in the EU language, "a mandatory temporary solidarity contribution on the profits of businesses active in the crude petroleum, natural gas, coal, and refinery sectors", would be calculated on excess profits, as determined under national tax rules in the fiscal year starting in 2022 and/or in 2023, which are above a 20% increase of the average yearly taxable profits since 2018. The windfall levy will apply as a top-up tax to regular taxes and levies applicable in all member states.

"We live in exceptional times and are working in an exceptionally fast, coordinated and solidary manner to form a united front against Russia's continuous weaponizing of energy supplies. The agreement will bring relief to European citizens and companies. Member states will flatten the curve of electricity demand during peak hours, which will have a direct positive effect on prices. Member states will redistribute surplus profits from the energy sector to those who are struggling to pay their bills.", said Jozef Síkela, Czech minister of industry and trade, on behalf of the Czech EU Presidency.

The revenue will go to Member states to support households and companies and to mitigate the cost-of-living crisis. Member states will be allowed to keep national measures already in place that are equivalent to the windfall tax, provided they are compatible with the objectives and are proportionate. EU Member states such as Ireland expect to collect between €1bn-€2bn on the lower end of what should be possible to raise under the EU approved windfall energy profits levy.

In the UK, former Chancellor of Exchequer Rishi Sunak introduced in May this year a similar tax to EU's levy, which was entitled Energy Profits Levy and applies to excess profits on entities extracting UK oil and gas, excluding 'green' electricity from nuclear or wind power. In spite of the widely criticised tax cuts announced by the new Prime Minister Liz Truss, the 'mini-budget' of the new Chancellor contained no reference to abolishing the energy profits levy nor were there any changes to the rate of corporation tax and charges applicable to oil and gas companies.

EU Set to Blacklist Bahamas, Recommend Dialogue With a Number of Jurisdictions

The European Union intends to remove Bahamas from the blacklist of non-cooperative jurisdictions for taxation purposes, according to a draft document of the General Secretariat of the Council of EU.

Following the Code of Conduct Group meetings on 9, 15 and 20 September 2022 and the High Level Working Party on Tax Questions meeting of 20 September 2022, the Permanent Representatives have recommended that the Council accept modifications to the EU blacklist. Notably, the Bahamas will be blacklisted for its role in facilitating offshore structures and arrangements aimed at attracting profits without real economic substance, also by failing to take all necessary actions to ensure the effective implementation of substance requirements and implement the CbCR minimum standard (criterion 3.2 by addressing the IF on BEPS' recommendations in due time, so that this is reflected in the IF Action 13 Peer Review Report).

In addition the Council shall recommend to certain states to engage with the EU to bring their tax practices in line with EU law and policy, notably:

- In the area of tax transparency: Turkey, Barbados, Botswana, Dominica, Seychelles;
- In the area of fair taxation: Costa Rica, Hong Kong, Malaysia, Qatar, Uruguay
- On technological - economic zones with preferential taxation: North Macedonia, Jamaica, Jordan, Armenia;
- In the area of preferential tax regimes/ holding companies: Russia.

The EU expressed regret that some jurisdictions failed to fulfil their commitments to the Code of Conduct Group with regard to economic substance requirements and invites these jurisdictions to engage with the Code of Conduct Group in order to resolve the remaining issues.
